

Aunt Sally's Money

Aunt Sally Henderson was the widow of a farmer. She was a bustling little woman with a babyish look. She kept a hired man on the farm and a hired girl in the kitchen, but she was a boss and a worker as well. She was kind to wayfarers and a liberal contributor to the unfortunate, and she was ready to take advice on all points but one. There she was singularly obstinate and seemingly foolish.

During his lifetime Farmer Henderson had been the victim of a bank failure. True, he lost only $17 in it, but it was a lesson to last him the rest of his days and to be handed over to his wife when he departed. She had been a widow for three years, when a sister died and left her a thousand dollars in cash. There was then a private banker in the nearest village, and he was spoken of by all as God fearing and strictly honest. There were people who had known him from infancy, and they vouched that there was not a blot on his character. When Aunt Sally got her thousand she was advised to bank it. She declined. After she had been talked to by her neighbors, her minister, the justice of the peace and others she did consent to drive into the village one day and take a look at the banker. He looked good to other folks, but after five minutes Aunt Sally turned from him and said:

"I wouldn't trust that man with a single dollar!"

"But why?" was asked.

"Because he toes in when he walks. You take my word for it, he'll turn out to be a rascal."

She was laughed at, but she said no toe-in banker for her thousand dollars. She kept it in the house. Of course she was warned of the danger of robbers, but she smiled in her baby way and replied that they could come on as fast as convenient. In a month it was known pretty much all over the county that Aunt Sally Henderson had a thousand dollars in the house. Some said it was buried in the cellar, others that it was hidden in the garret, others still that it was in a trunk under her bed. With everybody talking there was bound to be results.

It was a big tramp who came limping along the highway at sundown one day and talked of his misadventures and afflictions. Besides his limp he had his left arm in a sling. No friends, no home, nothing in the future for him. He wept as Aunt Sally questioned him. He was fed and given quarters in the barn. At midnight he came out of the barn without his limp or his sling and raised a kitchen window and stepped in. As he stepped in he also stepped into a beartrap yawning for Weary Willie, and the jaws closed on one of his legs. He was a big man, and he made a fuss according to his size. Aunt Sally dressed and came out of her bedroom and had him carried out on the lawn. There he was tied up and the trap removed, and she said she would see him later. After breakfast his case was attended to. The hired man brought up some blue beach gaiters, and while he laid them on Aunt Sally stood by and sang "Shall We Gather at the River?"

The next corner floated in from the village. He was traveling with a circus as a seller of pink lemonade. Although he was making 500 per cent on his liquid he signed to get rich faster. Hearing of that thousand, he waited out to cooper it and buy some cold storage stock. No kitchen window for him. In the first place he was too teeny, and in the next he found a parlor window open. It looked good to him. He went in. The same beartrap was there. Aunt Sally had simply shifted it. The victim had a good voice on him, and he used it to arouse the house. He was taken out and laid on the grass as the other had been, but when morning came his punishment was a bit different. The rain barrel at the corner of the house was full, and he was lifted up and ducked until he had swallowed about half the contents and was nearly drowned in the rest. It was the hired man and girl who did the ducking.

The last attempt on that $1,000, so far as heard from, for the widow still lives and keeps it in the house, was a pretty fair plot. A stranger called and introduced himself as a minister, who wanted board in a quiet place for a month while he composed half a dozen sermons and rested up. He took in, but Aunt Sally took him in and determined to watch. One afternoon at the end of the second week she had to spend an hour at the barn with a sick horse, and he was left to finish a sermon on the sin of dancing and circus going. When she came back to the house he was hunting among the cobwebs of the garret for an old cylinder can holding a thousand dollars. He claimed to have gone up there to be nearer heaven, and his claim was not disputed. He was tied up, however, and lowered down the well. It was a deep well and a cold well, and he had no fur coat. He was left there for and gently roared, women will find in all the seasons of their lives, as maidens, wives and mothers, that the one simple, wholesome laxative remedy, which acts gently and pleasantly and naturally and which may be taken at any time, when the system needs a laxative, with perfect safety and really beneficial effects, is Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

It has that true delicacy of flavor which is so refreshing to the taste, that warming and grateful toning to the stomach which responds so favorably to its action and the laxative effect which is so beneficial to the system when, occasionally, its gentle cleansing is required.

three hours, while the widow sang "Beacon Lights" for him. He was then hauled up and thawed out with a thorough good licking, handed his manuscripts and headed out into the world. He had dashes of heat and cold as he went, and he heard Aunt Sally singing "Watchman, What of the Night?" until he was half a mile away.

And two days later the good banker, the honest banker, the banker who took in as he walked, walked off with all the deposits in bank.

Khartum. Khartum owes its existence to an oriental form of treachery. When Khedive Mohammed Ali invaded the Sudan in 1820 he marched triumphantly to Shendi, where his troops were entertained at a banquet by the submissive natives. But while the khedive's high officials were seated at the feast they shared the fate of the vultures and were themselves reduced to funeral baked meats. Full of fury, the army fell on Shendi and demolished it. Marching south, the invaders reached the junction of the Nile and White Nile. With the conqueror's instinct they recognized that the strip of land, with its few fishermen's huts of straw, formed ideal strategic headquarters. So Khartum steadily grew into the most sensitive part of the Sudan organism.

RUB THE OTHER EYE.

And Let the One in Which the Bit of Cinder Lodges Alone.

Nine persons out of every ten with a cinder or any other foreign substance in the eye will instantly begin to rub it with one hand while hunting for a handkerchief with the other. This is all wrong. The right way is not to rub the eye with the cinder in it, but to rub the other as vigorously as you like.

A few months ago I was riding on the engine of a fast express. The engineer threw open the front window of the cab, and I caught a cinder in my eye, which gave me intense pain. I began to rub the eye desperately, when the engineer called to me:

"Let that eye alone and rub the other one."

Thinking he was kidding me, I only rubbed the harder.

"I know the doctors think they know it all, but they don't, and if you will let that eye alone and work on the other one you will soon have the cinder out," shouted the engineer.

I did as he directed and soon felt the cinder down near the inner corner and made ready to take it out.

"Let it alone and keep at the well eye," again shouted the engineer.

I did so for a minute longer, and then, looking into a small glass the engineer handed me, I saw the offender on my cheek. I have tried it many times since, always with success.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Where History Began. Describing a visit to the tombs of the Egyptian kings, Albert Bigelow Paine in Harper's Weekly writes of the splendid tomb of Amenophis II., of the eighteenth dynasty, who lived in the glory of Egypt, 1800 B. C., a warrior who slew seven Syrian chiefs with his own hand. The top of the sarcophagus is removed and is replaced by heavy plate glass. Just over the sleeper's face there is a tiny electric globe, and I believe one could never tire of standing there and looking at that quiet visage, darkened by age, but beautiful in its dignity, unmoved, undisturbed by the storm and stress of the fretful years. How long he has been asleep! The Israelites were still in bondage when he fell into that quiet doze, and for their exodus a century or two later he did not care. Hector and Achilles and Paris and the rest had not yet battled on the plains of Troy.

Drougham and Muffed Port. Lord Drougham who as a member of the house of commons was a most abstemious man, upon his promotion to the peerage acquired less commendable habits. During his long and impassioned appeal to the lords to refrain from rejecting the reform bill of 1832 "five tumblers of mullied port, with a dash of brandy, were brought to him at intervals." When he came to his last sentence ("I warn you, I implore you—yes, on my bended knee I supplicate you—refuse not this bill") he knelt on the woolsack, whence he slipped to the floor. It is recorded in the "Lives of the Lord Chancellors" that "he remained some time as if in prayer, but his friends, alarmed lest he should be suffering from the effects of mullied port, picked him up and placed him safely on the woolsack."

Hadn't Heard It. "Money talks," asserted Gbder Devere.

"I am not so sure of that," retorted Throckmorton. "It is not on speaking terms with me."—Detroit Free Press.

WOULD OUST BALLINGER

Secretary Norton Said to Be Interested

MR. HITCHCOCK'S VISIT

To Beverly Part of Movement—Publicity Killed Senator Crane's Mission—President's Secretary Shows Much Sagacity.

Washington, Aug. 11.—That Postmaster General Hitchcock will be sought to do what he can toward getting Secretary Ballinger out of the cabinet, while he is in Beverly this week, is the information that is disclosed here on high authority. It is now well known in Washington that the man who is setting the forces in motion to have Ballinger get out of the cabinet is private Secretary Norton. Mr. Norton, since he has been in the position of private secretary to the president, has shown himself possessed of keen political acumen. He is impressed by the complaints of politicians which are reaching Beverly that Ballinger's presence in the cabinet is an obstacle to Republican success in the present campaign. How far Mr. Norton has the backing of Mr. Taft can only be conjectured. It cannot be assumed he is doing what he knows his chief would disapprove.

That the mission of Senator Crane in so far as it related to removing Ballinger from the cabinet was a failure and that the publicity given it prevented its success is the statement made here in well-informed quarters. Now it is said Mr. Norton takes the view that Hitchcock, having been chiefly instrumental in getting Ballinger into the cabinet, should be chiefly instrumental in getting him out.

Whether Mr. Hitchcock would see fit to urge Ballinger to quit is a question. It may be doubted if he would do so unless asked to by the president himself, and the president is not likely to ask it. At the same time, the influence of Norton with the administration is on the increase, and that of Hitchcock has distinctly lessened since he went into the cabinet, and there is the possibility that Hitchcock might feel he could rehabilitate himself more if Ballinger were to go.

YOUNG WOMAN VERY ILL.

Girl for Whom Gamaliel Bradford, 34, Died in State of Collapse.

South Framingham, Mass., Aug. 11.—The body of Gamaliel Bradford, 34, who committed suicide Monday at a local hotel here because the young woman he loved refused to break her engagement with another man and marry him, was removed from a morgue in this city yesterday to Mount Auburn, where funeral services were held later in the day.

Young Bradford, who was graduated from Harvard university in the class of 1890, fell in love with the woman, Miss Elizabeth Corcoran, a telephone operator in a larger office in Boston, while he was employed as a bank clerk in that city. Bradford was a direct descendant of William Bradford, the first governor of the Puritan Plymouth colony.

Ignorant of the death of Bradford, Miss Corcoran lies in a state of collapse in a hospital here. She now believes he is in the same hospital and has a fair chance of recovering. The physician attending the young woman fears that if she were informed of the death of Bradford the result would be serious.

The autopsy held on Bradford's body showed that he held the revolver with which he committed suicide so close over his left eye that it tore a ragged cut in the head. The ball was located in the back of the skull.

Joseph Kelley, the telegraph operator in Pittsfield to whom Miss Corcoran is engaged and whom she was going to marry next Monday, Tuesday night visited the house where his fiancée was staying. It is believed here that the marriage will have to be postponed because of the serious condition of Miss Corcoran. He returned to Pittsfield yesterday morning.

Robert Lorraine Flies Sixty Miles in 1 Hour 33 Minutes.

London, Aug. 11.—Robert Lorraine, the American actor, who has been making a hit in England with his aeroplane flights, made a splendid flight yesterday. He started yesterday morning from Blackpool and flew across a wide stretch of the Irish sea to Rhos. The distance covered was over fifty miles.

Lorraine used a Parman biplane. He ascended at Blackpool in a heavy mist, which obscured the land for a long time. At first he kept parallel with the coast, but later diverged and crossed the estuary of the River Ribble. He flew over Southampton and then to the southwest an over the Irish sea.

The distance covered in the flight was over sixty miles and was accomplished in 1 hour and 33 minutes.

SHEEP AND CATTLE AT WAR.

Feuds of the Stockmen on Wyoming Ranges.

Until a few years ago Wyoming was one of the big range cattle states of the country. Eastern and English capitalists invested their money in Wyoming stock, just as they do in railroads, and the sons of Yankee and English capitalists flocked to Wyoming to see life and be reeled into men according to the heroic standards of the West. Each big ranch had its ranch house and its boundaries; their confines were marked by mountains, streams, and other natural and unchanging witnesses, and a description of the limits of each ranch was published continually in the Cheyenne papers. The cattlemen had merely appropriated so many hundred square miles each of the public domain, without warrant, right, or title and over these vast stretches they were absolute lords, exercising all the feudal privileges.

The big "barons," as they were generally called, their manager, and the sons of Englishmen and Yankees lived in Cheyenne, paying periodical visits to the ranches. Cheyenne, up to 1894, was the richest town of its size in the United States—richer than many a city twenty times as large. Splendid residences were built along the black streets. Old world extravaganzas stood in contrast with the raw makeshifts of the unstable times. Toll-free coaches, the drivers' hats level with the house tops of most of the hastily built town, carrying gay loads to and from the revels at Fort Russell, the military post near by; and the Cheyenne club, to which all the bloods belonged, offered as many opportunities for quiet and "gentlemanly" exercises with bottle or gaming table as any club in Manhattan or London. And while the sons and paid managers drank and gambled and revelled, certain crafty ones were draining them of their wealth and barons left.

The sheep industry in the West had begun in Wyoming almost forty years ago; but it did not reach a size sufficient to be a cloud on the cattlemen's fair day until 1894. From that time until the present, a constant, bloody, one-sided war has been waged by the cattlemen against the flockmasters and their sheep. As the sheep industry sprang from its cradle, Wyoming, the warfare followed into other states. Colorado's hills have been marked by the trickling of sheepmen's blood; Montana and Idaho hold in their plains and lonely gorges the bones of hundreds whose lives were stalked and lost in the battle of the sheep. In the West that ancient emblem of purity and innocence, the lamb skin, might well be hung aloft as the banner by midnight assassins, of men that murder by stealth and hide the evidence under the ashes of roof trees and isolated camps.

Throughout all this trouble the contempt in which the shepherd and his calling have been held by men of arms since there were sheep and men to local them appears well justified. For years cattlemen have been murdering the flockmasters of the West, and butchering their silly flocks, but there never has been an act of reprisal—not one retaliatory or defensive blow. Wyoming has been the hotbed of all the trouble; but until last year there never has been a conviction in Wyoming for the killing of a sheepman; nor a conviction for the destruction of a sheepman's property. When a flockmaster's flocks are scattered and slain, his wagons and ranch horses burned, although he could walk out and put his hand on the guilty persons, one and all, he does nothing but go grimly and patiently to work repairing the loss. Sheepmen do not fight back.

It is hard to understand why these Scotch, Irish, and purely American flockmasters did not band together and at once defend themselves at the very beginning. It may be the association with evil-doers and non-combatants beasts that renders the shepherd meek and harmless, or it may be that the lone watches of his solitary life drain him of his manhood. Whatever it is, no matter what a man was before he went into the sheep business, in six months' time he has no more fight in him than a biscuit.

HEAVY RAINS DURING JULY

Hindered Excavation—2,406,288 Cubic Yards Taken Out, However—The Total Cubic Yards of Concrete Laid 131,653.

Washington, Aug. 11.—Seven tons of dynamite have been exploded in each of the two dikes that protected the excavation at Santa Cruz Point from the Chagres river destroying them. This allows the river to flow through the completed section, which is in the Gatun lake region, at the next freshet. This and another similar section completed within seven months make one mile of canal which is finished.

The total amount of excavation on the Panama canal for July was 2,406,288 cubic yards, plus measurement, against 2,616,600 cubic yards in the previous month. There were twenty-five working days in July, against twenty-six in June, while the rainfall for July was 15.85 inches, against 11.87 inches in the previous month. The average daily output in July was 92,232 cubic yards, against 100,639 cubic yards in June. The amount of concrete laid during July was 131,653 cubic yards, against 124,214 cubic yards in June, and 654,095 cubic yards of fill were placed in dams in July, against 664,155 yards in the previous month.

HEARING ON RATES INTO BOSTON.

Commerce Commission to Begin Investigation Aug. 16.

Freight rates on milk shipped into Boston will be considered by interstate commerce commissioner Prouty at Boston, Aug. 16. The case to be heard involves recent advances in the transportation of milk by the Boston & Maine railroad. In accordance with the tariffs filed by the road with the interstate commerce commission, the annual rental system of care for the shipment of milk into Boston is abandoned and all milk shippers are required to pay a flat rate. It is alleged that the new system increases the price of milk to both Boston wholesalers and consumers. The railroad maintains that the new tariffs eliminate discrimination between the large wholesalers and the small dealers.

FREIGHT RATE INQUIRY AUG. 29.

Hearing Will Begin in Chicago by Commerce Commission Examiner.

Inquiry into the proposed advances in the freight rates recently made by the roads of the Western Trunk Line association, will begin in Chicago, Aug. 29. The hearing will be held by Judge George H. Brown and C. R. Miller, examiners of the interstate commerce commission. It is possible that all of the roads interested may not be prepared to proceed on that date, but such testimony will be taken as the railroads have in readiness. When that is exhausted, a time will be fixed by the commission for the taking of the remainder of the testimony.

ALDRICH STANDS BY HIS EARLIER DECISION

Rumor He Has Changed His Mind About Another Term Denied—Will Make Reply to Bristow Charge.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 11.—Details of the conference at Warwick, R. I., last Sunday, attended by Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, Senator W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts, and the president's secretary, Mr. Norton, became known here yesterday. It is said that Senator Aldrich definitely told his callers that he had reconsidered his determination not to run again for the Senate and he had made all his plans to retire from public service. We went so far as to discuss his probable successor and left the distinct understanding that his decision is irrevocable.

It was learned further here yesterday that Senator Aldrich, breaking a life long precedent of never issuing a statement under fire, has decided to make a public reply to the charges of Senator Bristow of Kansas, regarding the rubber schedule of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. The senator has told his friends, who have urged him to reply to the charges, that he has never felt called upon to make statements in response to "malicious or unjust attacks." In this instance, coming on the eve of an important congressional campaign, however, it is said that the senator, after deliberating for several weeks, and talking the matter over with his friends, has decided that it is due the Republican party that a reply should be made to the Bristow charges.

Senator Aldrich has been at work on his statement in reply to the rubber charges for several days. He has told some of the friends who have talked with him in regard to the matter that he is proud of the part he played in framing this schedule and that he will make his course absolutely plain.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.
